

🧑 Tye – Character Profile

SeedFolks Game | Makerhouse Lore

Identity

- 100% American-African
- Lineage: Raised by both parents and grandparents – deeply rooted in Black American history.

Symbolism & Archetype

- Tye embodies the "Killmonger" archetype – fully aware that resources were taken by design, not chance.

- His narrative confronts the reality that his history has been erased, “thrown out with the rest of the trash.”

Legacy & Land

- His family started the town he lives in.
 - They were the original Seed Folks, builders of Black paradise during post-Reconstruction America.
 - These thriving communities were not accidents—they were acts of vision, resilience, and resistance.

Oppression by Design

- Systems like Reaganomics and urban planning didn’t neglect his people—they targeted them.
 - Highways weren’t just roads; they were weapons—crafted to carve through Black communities and force them into:
 - Internment camps → Ghetto → The Projects
 - Spaces where freedom, mobility, and ownership were systematically constrained.

Themes

- Dispossession, Survival, Reclamation
- Tye is not just a character—he’s a counter-narrative, a walking indictment of the American dream’s broken promise.
- He fights not just to grow a garden, but to reclaim the land, the story, and the soul of a stolen legacy.
